

Nursing as a career

I never dreamed I'd be here today
When I was young I knew I would care for others
Caring for others, giving my all
Taking care of the sick large and small
From physical pain to mental pain
Nothing is too lame to complain
One day you are choosing a book to read
The next day you are choosing a class to succeed
Which career is your calling
There are so many, which way are you falling
Nursing I always knew was top of my list
Maybe, the white dress would make me pretty, I insist
Trauma, I loved all the blood, guts and the gore
Could never get enough of that, I just adore.
Nursing school was a challenge to say the least
Some would even say it was a beast
But I promise if you study you will not regret
My nursing dree has allowed me so much and now I have reset
Through my years I have cried because of death
I have cried because of a baby has taken its first breath
I have been hit cursed, bit, pinched, punched and knocked down
I have been picked up, loved on, told how precious I am
Today I get to touch other's lives
By giving knowledge, love to beehives
Beehives of students coming thru my classes
They go out into the world, my hope is they look thru my glasses
And take just a small part of me
Giving love to others as I would only see.
My hope is that all choose a career that you can love
Whatever it is that you choose always give from the heart and go beyond and above!
